The public is braced against the shock of war-rationing on such items as new automobiles and new tires, but since our actual entry into war so many processed materials have been banned that a profound change may follow in our manner of living and our methods of merchandising.

Eire Protests Landing of U. S. Combat Troops

Prime Minister Says Irish Government Not Consulted

DUBLIN (AP)—Prime Minister Eamon de Valera issued a statement Tuesday protesting against the arrival of United States troops in northern Ireland, across the border from Eire. The statement declared that Eire was not consulted either by British or American governments with regard to their coming.

De Valera based his objection on an emphasis with the split between Eire and North Ireland by the establishment of American forces on the north side of the border. His statement referred to the fight 20 years ago when he said the Ireland nation was petitioned despite the will of the Irish people.

He compared the division of Ireland with the partition of Poland and called it one of the cruelest wrongs that could be committed.

However, he declared the people of Ireland have no feeling of hostility toward and no desire to be brought in any way into conflict with the United States.

American Forces Dominate World Battle Fronts

Running Battle With Jap Invasion Fleet Enters Fifth Day

By the Associated Press
American battle forces dominated the new on far flung war fronts Tuesday as Britain wildly cheered the arrival of a second AEF vanguard in northern Ireland and halfway around the world U. S. planes and submarines slashed at the remnants of a once powerful Japanese invasion army off Dutch Borneo.

In the Philippines two American pursuit planes shot down two rising Sun dive bombers and disabled a third in the last 24 hours and American torpedo boats engaged a formation of dive bombers, hitting three. In the great American-Dutch naval victory off Borneo, Netherlands East Indies accounts claimed only 28 Japanese ships sunk and damaged and 13 planes downed—and accounts listed six others as less heavily damaged.

Pressing home Japan's first major defeat the defending American and Dutch forces already have sunk or damaged 344 Japanese warships and troop transports in the shark-infested waters of the strait of Macassar. The running battle continued into its fifth day Tuesday.

In addition a dispatch from Batavia said another heavy Japanese warship, believed to have been a battleship, had been sunk in the Macassar straits. Tokyo headquarters acknowledged that four Japanese transports were lost in the battle last Friday during landing operations at Balikpapan, a rich oil center on the east coast of Dutch Borneo facing the Macassar strait.

On the Malayan front the critical battle for Singapore raged with fury as the Japanese scored a 12-mile advance on the west coast and bitter fighting developed at Senggang, only 48 miles north of Singapore. Front line dispatches said the key rail and highway town of Kluang, 50 miles above Singapore had apparently fallen. The British acknowledged fighting south of there.

Batavia dispatches in Malaya the arrival of American troops in England and an official disclosure that U. S. bombers would join the RAF brightened the outlook.

In England the cry spread like wildfire: "The Yanks are here." Spectators jammed the streets as troops marched out of dockyards after a brief official greeting to swing along in full battle kit to the strains of "Marching Through Georgia."

The contingent, commanded by Major Russell P. Hartle, was described officially as "combat troops—several thousand strong."

Merchandise stolen included cigarettes, beer, a gun, several pounds of meat, candy and two coats and about 50 pennies. The burglars also damaged a music box considerably but failed to pry open the coin box inside the machine.

No arrests have been made. The police continue to investigate.

OPA Authorized to Ration All Retail Goods

Power Extended Also to Sale of Personal Need Products

WASHINGTON (AP)—Chairman Donald M. Nelson Tuesday gave Price Administrator Leon Henderson full authority to "ration all goods and commodities sold on the retail markets and any other products sold to consumers for the satisfaction of personal needs."

Henderson could exercise his power over:
1. Sale of products by any person who sells at retail.
2. The sale of products to ultimate consumers acquiring products for the satisfaction of personal need as distinct from business and industry needs.

The war production boss said the delegation of this authority marks a step in the preparation of rationing of consumer's products.

"Shortages exist in many basic raw materials. Further rationing seems inevitable in so far as the civilian population is concerned in ordinary purchase of personal requirements."

The order announced Tuesday gives full control to OPA although as chairman of the war production board Nelson reserves the right to amend the delegation.

Barham Goes Down Last November Admiralty Says

LONDON (AP)—The sinking of the battleship Barham, 31,000-ton veteran of the British Navy in the Mediterranean, on last November 25, was announced Tuesday by the admiralty after it had kept the loss secret for two months to "cheat the enemy of any profit from the knowledge of its blow."

Says AEF Only Vanguard of More to Come

Demands Confidence of Parliament; U. S. Planes to Team With RAF

LONDON (AP)—Prime Minister Winston Churchill presented Britain Tuesday with a picture of growing Allied might and unity and demanded that Parliament vote confidence in his government.

Against the frank admission that bad news comes from the Pacific battlefield he told commons that U. S. troops which have landed in Ireland are only a vanguard of more to come.

"U. S. fighter planes will help defend Britain against air assault and U. S. bombers will join the RAF in the bombing of Germany."

"Considerable reinforcements have reached the Malayan front in the past week."

"We have taken many measures with the United States to increase security of Australia and New Zealand and by sending reinforcements, arms and equipment by the best routes."

Demands Confidence
"It is because I see the light gleaming behind the clouds and broadening upon our path," he said at the end of the report of good and evil in Britain's war fortunes, "that makes me so bold now as to demand a declaration of confidence of the House of Commons as a weapon in the armory of the United nations."

At the close of his speech the House of Commons began a debate on Britain's war direction which Churchill will wind up this week with another speech.

"Cheers that greeted the one hour and 24 minute accounting left no doubt how commons will vote when the question is put to test."

To Regain Supremacy
"We shall presently regain naval command of the Pacific and begin to establish effective superiority in the air," Churchill predicted.

He pledged that the Malayan Peninsula and Singapore would be defended to the last inch and doubted that Japan would attempt an invasion of Australia—"a very ambitious overseas operation in the precarious and certainly limited time before the British and American navies regain, as they must regain, command of the Pacific."

"There is no question of regarding the Pacific war as a secondary operation."

"The U. S. Navy is linked in the most intimate union with the Admiralty, both operating in the Atlantic and the Pacific."

Although he said "I must confess to a feeling of weight of war upon me even more than in the summer days of 1940" he spoke with obvious confidence and in good humor.

He told one of the largest audiences to pack commons session "I feel the broadening swell of victory and liberation."

The house was so crowded that some members had to sit on the floor.

2. Three calcified tissues forming a tooth are the enamel covering over the crown of the tooth; the dentine that forms its essential substance; the cementum investing the root.
3. No. Teeth are attached to the skeleton, but do not form a part of it.
4. Incisors, or cutting teeth, are at the front of the mouth; canines (so called from their prominence in the dog) are next to the incisors; bicuspids or premolars are next back from the canines. Multicuspid or true molars are farthest back.

German Army Raids Denmark's Storehouse

LITTLE Denmark, whose peaceful cities and fields were overrun by Nazi hordes in April, 1940, is now the economic and agricultural cracking point because of German confiscation of supplies and foodstuffs. King Christian X, pictured in the equestrian statue in front of Amalienborg palace on the stamp above, and his government, accepted the occupation under protest.

Because of the difficult strategic and geographical position of Denmark, the Danes could offer little resistance to the overwhelming German forces.

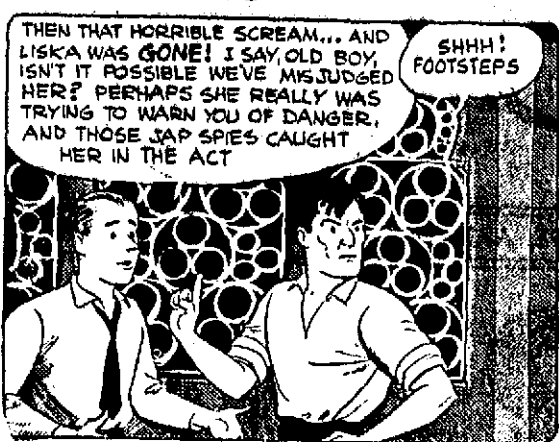

Germany, however, is running into trouble in Denmark. Reports from Stockholm, Sweden, say King Christian has threatened to abdicate unless Germany relaxes demands for the enactment of anti-Jewish laws by the Danes.

The Nazi reverses on Russian and the African battlefronts have forced the Germans to dig still deeper into the already depleted Danish stores. Strongly pro-British, Denmark hopes for an allied victory to restore order out of chaos to their land.

"The Timeless Land" by Eleanor Dark is now book at library.
 "The Timeless Land" a recent selection of the Book-of-the-Month Club, is a richly colorful story of the first five years of English settlement in Australia, and of the black natives whose life and culture and natural gaiety were so cruelly destroyed in that short time. The story is a dramatic one, here eloquently told.

The few hundreds of convicts who landed in Sydney Harbor in 1788 make poor pioneer stock indeed. That they survive at all is due to the courage and wisdom of their Captain Phillip. His story is told here, as is that of a fictional character, Andrew Prentice, a red-headed convict who escapes, and flourishes with his native wife in the wilds, while his countrymen back at the settlement are near starvation.

Parallel to the slow establishment of the white colony runs the sad history of the black men's demoralization, personified in Bennilong, an historical figure and leader in his tribe, who develops a fatal friendliness toward the English. A visit to London completes his undoing.

An excellent story and background make this Mrs. Dark's most ambitious and most important novel.

Young America and the War

Best Prescription Is to Keep Them Busy

By DOROTHY ROE
 AP Feature Service Writer
 Keep them busy.

That's the best prescription for the guidance of children in wartime, leading child psychologists now agree. American parents, apprehensive as to the effect of the present war psychology on their children, may take comfort in the experience of English fathers and mothers, who have found that little Johnny and Mary often weather the war alarms more calmly than their parents.

"Children can stand a lot more than you might think," says Mrs. Sidonie M. Gruenberg, director of the Child Study Association of America, now planning a series of war instruction classes for parents. "Too much protection is almost worse than too little. The best plan is to encourage children to continue the daily pattern of their lives with as little change as possible. Don't alarm them with constant discussion of the war and its dangers. But on the other hand don't exclude them from any discussion of the war. Teach them to take it in their stride."

Mrs. Gruenberg believes that the attitude of children toward war and its dangers depends entirely on the parents. If father and mother remain calm in the midst of rumors and alarms, the children will feel a sense of security. If, however, parents become hysterical, the children are likely to follow suit.

Older children may be given certain responsibilities—things to do in case of an air raid. Younger children may be taught to play war games, so that the real thing, if and when it comes, will not be a shock.

Making it Tougher

DECATURE, Ill.—(AP)—If you get a flat tire here, reach for your identification card ahead of your jack. Under a drastic order designed to curb thefts of the rationed articles, police have been instructed to regard every tire changer as a tire thief until he proves otherwise.

to light and to washing, whether and how much the garment is likely to shrink, and what special finishes, if any, have been applied to the material. This information should be obtained from labels, clerks, and store buyers when the purchase is made.

Most important step, however, in taking care of clothing is the cleaning or laundering of the garment. Pointing out that the proper method of cleaning a garment varies with the fibers in the fabric, Miss Fletcher gives the following directions for cleaning wool, rayon, and cotton as recommended by Miss Sue Marshall of the University of Arkansas College of Agriculture.

The right way to wash wool is to use warm, soft water and mild soap. Squeeze suds through cloth—don't rub. Dry in a warm place, but not near a fire. For rayon, use cold water. Stretch knit garments into shape while they are damp and lay them out flat to dry. Press other wool garments while they are still damp with a medium-hot iron and a pressing cloth.

Rough handling while it is wet, harsh soap, sudden extremes of temperature in washing water or drying cause a wool garment to become bumpy.

For washable rayons, heavy lukewarm suds of neutral soaps should be used. Do not rub, but handle them with particular care while they are wet. Rinse in water the same temperature of the wash water. Iron with a moderately warm iron. For acetate rayons, keep the temperature even lower. It is a good idea to try the iron first on the back part of a hem or a seam to make sure it is not so hot it will melt the rayon.

The sensible way to clean most cottons is to wash them. Colored cottons need to be colorfast both to washing and to light if they are to be satisfactory for long wear.

Since the present price of eggs and the need for greater production in the Farm Defense Program will probably increase the demand for baby chicks for the coming season, prospective buyers of chicks should place their orders soon so that they may be certain of getting early hatched chicks, says Miss Fletcher, county home demonstration agent.

The best time for hatching chicks, Miss Fletcher says, will, of course, vary with the breed of chickens and the purpose for which they are grown. In this regard, S. A. Moore of the University of Arkansas College of Agriculture, recommends that broilers be hatched before April and that, of the chicks hatched for egg production, White Leghorns hatched in April and other breeds a month earlier.

Stressing the fact that broilers should be placed on the market early if they are to bring the best prices, the Extension poultry specialist points out that broilers hatched after the first of April usually sell for lower prices than those hatched earlier.

As for chicks grown for egg production, these should be hatched with the view of bringing them into production at a season when egg prices are highest, Moore says. Pullets mature in September or early October are usually the most profitable. Since White Leghorns and similar breeds mature more rapidly than such breeds as Rocks, Reds, and Wyandottes, the Leghorns may be hatched later. Leghorns hatched in April, and other breeds hatched a month earlier should reach maturity about the proper time. Birds hatched much earlier than this are apt to molt in the fall and the advantage of early hatching will be lost, the Extension specialist says.

War Flutters From the Flicker Front

HOLLYWOOD—Behind the screen,

There'll be an Academy Awards dinner this winter after all, but the usual glamor-clamor is to be eclipsed by patriotic festivities and reports on Hollywood's war activities. This change in purpose well might result in the presentation by proxy of a special award for the Best Performance of the Year—to the Marines of Wake Island.

Generals may be sitting behind the huge desks in producers' offices soon, and burly sergeants may be quartered in scented, satin dressing rooms now occupied by stars. There's a chance the Army will take over one of the major studios as a troop concentration point and headquarters.

The sheer excellence of facilities makes such a move seem likely. Each of the movie lots has 20 or more sound stage buildings which literally overnight could become enormous barracks. The back lots, some of them 100 or more acres, have paved streets, power, water and sewer lines.

There are garages and machine shops and plenty of buildings which could be converted into kitchens, laundries and hospitals. There are hundreds of excellent offices, of course, and everything is connected by exceptionally fine communication lines.

No Durbins Peace
 Reports that Deanna Durbin and Universal are making peace, and that she'll star in "Boy Meets Girl," which Bob Cummings are just wishful thinking on the part of the studio.

Frances Farmer is kicking up her heels again. She's on suspension at Paramount for refusing a role in "Take a Letter, Darling" . . . Speaking of rebellious actresses: Ida Lupino clicked big in "They Drive by Night," and then turned down a role in "Captains of the Clouds." The latter picture gave Brenda Marshall her big chance, and now Miss Marshall has refused to play in "Escape From Crime," which brings opportunity to Irene Manning.

New cycle of musicals is beginning to get under way. Eight are scheduled at 20th-Fox. Paramount is preparing one titled, "Priorities of 1942."

Living Berlin has whipped out a couple more songs for the country's benefit. "I Paid My Income Tax Today" will cheer the Treasury Department, and "The President's Birthday Ball" plugs the war on infantile paralysis. Ciro's, the most uppity night spot here about, has closed for the duration, and other clubs are dying. Movie people seem to be too busy to have fun formally.

Goofy Gal
 They're telling a gag about a silly blond actress who broke into some dinner-table chatter about axis spies by saying: "You know, I sometimes wonder if my Japanese gardener is all right—to be trusted, I mean. The other morning I found him trimming the hedge with a machine gun."

After testing reactions of preview audiences, Warners provided a happy ending for "Kings Row." The response cards said, "We don't care whether it's like the book: we just want it to end right." It's said that Warners bought "Aloha Means Goodbye" because a bigwig liked the title. And now the name of the story has been switched to "Across the Pacific."

DOC KNOWS FOOTBALL

CHAPTER XX

BETWEEN the halves an assistant coach came up to Doc and asked if he would talk with coach in the dressing room.

"What's all that about?" Juddy wanted to know.

"Coach probably wants his slant on the game," Van said.

"Why should he?"

"Because Oliver knows plenty football. He invented the split tandem when he was in college."

Juddy looked as if she didn't take any stock in it. "What's the split tandem?" she said.

"It's a chess opening," I told her.

Doc came back with the news that Angel was all right and would start the next quarter.

It was a sear with no advantage for maybe 10 minutes. Then, with our side having the ball, there was a complicated, hidden-ball play with Angel way out like a pass-receiver, and then sprinting across to block for Ramsdell who came down from nowhere and was pretty well in the clear. Big Scallinger was on the job, and turned him, and just then Angel dived plum into Scallinger's belly as another blocker took him on the side. This time he was the one that didn't get up.

Scallinger was a picture. His knees were wobbling, and you couldn't see his features for mud. Angel was dabbing at it to clear it away. At least that's what it looked like from the stands. I thought I saw something else, though, that I hoped the umpire didn't see. All of a sudden the big gorilla jerked away and made a wild swing at Angel. Angel ducked and grinned at him and patted him on the back.

They took Scallinger out, fighting, while the Welliver crowd was yelling for his blood again. He looked as if he was crying, too. Van Clark, next to me, had his field-glasses on the mix-up. I whispered to him;

"Did you see what I saw then?"

"Yes," he said. "Forget it."

While this was going on, Ramsdell was strolling across the line like a schoolmarm out for a walk. Maybe it came too easy for him. His kick for the extra point was a mile wide—and he hadn't missed twice before in the whole season.

Angel played like three men, after that. But everytime the boys were on their way a fumble or a penalty set them back. The count was still against us when the game went into the final quarter. It looked lousy. Then, with only two and a half minutes to go, and our fourth down, we had an outside chance for a drop kick.

The stands were yelling for Angel Todd. But a low-headed sophomore trotted out, cool as a hog on ice, and put the ball square between the posts and the game was in the bag.

Doc Oliver turned around to us with that pleasant, sort of impersonal smile of his. "Well, what did you think of it?"

For someone that had just cleaned up a nice pile, Juddy was no ray of sunshine.

"I wanted Angel to have more chance," she said.

"Say, gill," Van Clark leaned across to her. "The business of a linesman, in case you haven't been told, is to outplay the other guy."

"Of course. But—"

"Angel outplayed two opponents half the time and kept three plenty busy at odd moments. Isn't that right, Mr. Oliver?"

The Doc nodded. "I haven't seen better end play since Brud Holland. There's a professional scout from the Magnates here. Todd is likely to hear from him."

We all went over to Rogues Hall for a drink. There we ran into the Magnates representative.

"The big boy, here, sure did a job on that truckhorse of a tackle," he said, putting Angel on the shoulder.

"I thought it was rotten, the way he tried to hit Angel when Angel was trying to help him," Juddy said.

"Help him, huh?" The scout gave a hoot. "I'd hate to have anyone help me that way. Why, he rubbed enough dirt into that Tarzan's eyes to load a dump-

"Angel! You didn't!"

"Why, Juddy," he said "he'd have got me if I hadn't got him."

"You mean he tried to foul you?"

Angel laughed. "What's a foul when the ump isn't looking! Be sensible, sweetness. Somebody had to put him out."

"Well, I think it's rotten," Juddy said. "It takes all the fun out of winning my bet."

Angel put on his coaxing way. "Come on, honeybunch," he said. "Don't go prissy on me. Let's just the two of us go out to dinner somewhere."

"No, I don't want to, Angel," she said. "I'm going to Tambay."

Instead of taking it on the smile, as I expected he would, Angel got cocky. Could you blame him for feeling his oats?

"O. K., if that's the way you feel about it," he said. "I'll jog into town and get myself a snoot-ful of celebration."

We didn't see him for several days. I totted up the accounts for the week-end. We'd taken in close to three hundred and seventy-five dollars. Besides, there was Juddy's four hundred, and my fifty on the game.

Again I was singing at my work. Juddy wasn't. She felt bad about Angel when he didn't show up.

TAMBAY was shy another regular. Maurie Sears wasn't coming around any more. It got me to thinking. All his friends laid off him about the mix-up at the Rice Club. But there was a bunch of small-town rats that hung around the corners, and I heard they'd taken to sniggering and passing remarks when Maurie went past. One of 'em was a big loafer named Bixie Groff.

Bixie thought it would be smart to take a crack at a swell like Maurie Sears who, generally speaking, wouldn't so much as spit downwind in his direction. He braced him one morning as Maurie was going past with a hunting crop in his hand he was taking to the repair shop.

"Hey, Searsy!"

Being funny, of course. That kind of scum don't make themselves folksy with Mauries and Searses and Rantouls.

"What did you call me?" he said.

"Mister Sears, to you. Got your gun back from that Yankee?"

Maurie moved toward him, and he backed up. "Don't you hit me," he said.

His hand went to his belt, but he didn't get far enough to do any harm. The hunting crop cracked down on his wrist, and the knife rolled into the gutter.

None of the bunch was laughing now. Bixie was mouthing over his fingers.

"Look at his hand. Is it broken?"

Bantry examined it. "It looks right queer, Mr. Sears."

"Take him to Dr. Starrow. Tell the doctor the bill is to come to me. Has anyone else anything to say?"

That served notice on Leverton that Maurie Sears wasn't safe to fool with. The bad part of it was, though, that it started the talk up again. If I heard it once, I heard it twenty times from talky customers that it was only a question of time when Sears would get lickered up and go on the warpath of honor.

reserve officers, since his civilian flying was regarded as an equivalent. He learned much of European air forces, did considerable valuable exploratory work on routes abroad, all of which has been reported on and is presumed to have been available to the Army for several years. He is 29 years old, too old to fly actively in combat or to assume field command, for which he is not trained anyway. The Army has plenty of officers who trained as cadets at the same time as Lindbergh who have devoted the whole intervening 17 years to the air service.
Lindbergh's experience, unique as it is, should be used, and used in whatever way the Army authorities believe it most serviceable. The day war came, Lindbergh became just another man like all other men, with certain qualifications which the country should use to the best advantage.

The Complacent Arab and the Creeping Camel!

You know the story. The complacent Arab first allowed the camel to put his HEAD in the tent. Then his SHOULDERS. Finally the camel pushed ALL the way in . . . crowded the Arab out into the cold.

In that way, too, a free people can allow one little restriction to follow another . . . until FREEDOM is crowded out. How can WE avoid it? The answer is simple: The people must know WHAT is happening. They must have a FREE PRESS to tell them the facts.

In Germany, Hitler muzzled the press . . . signed up Goebbels. Then, when a restrictive law was passed, no newspaper could criticize. The press HAD to say: "You will like this fine new law! It is good for the state!" And the people believed it. For that was all the news they had. So they passed into POLITICAL slavery . . .

But that wasn't all! Hitler, for example, brought out a motor car. He told the press to say it was "The Best That Could Be Made." Competition was chained and muzzled. The public read only Hitler's claims. This way, and in a thousand others, they lost their right to choose. So they lost their ECONOMIC freedom, too!

Remember, a dictatorship cannot live WITH a free press, a democracy cannot live WITHOUT it. FACTS are the bedrock under your democratic right of deciding what to do, where to go, what to buy, how to vote.

Don't imagine the wide Atlantic safeguards freedom of the press in America! For the REAL danger is right here . . . in COMPLACENCY . . . in taking this freedom too much for granted.

The publisher can't do the job alone. It is YOUR responsibility, too! For it is your freedom, as well as ours, which MUST be protected!

"But," you ask, "just what can I do?"

To begin with, read your newspaper more carefully than ever. It brings you the FACTS. Think about what you read. Watch for restrictions (beyond those really necessary in time of emergency), restrictions not only on the press, but on ANY of your freedoms. Should you spot one, talk to your friends about it! Wake THEM up, too! Write your editor! Be an ACTIVE citizen!

For if you are complacent, democracy may be crowded out. Remember the Arab and the Camel!

In Germany, Italy, Russia, Japan, a government agency decides what the people shall read and hear. Not so in America. Do your part to preserve the American way of life.

Read, each Tuesday in this space, the messages about your liberty and how America's news papers help you defend it. Your letters of comment will be appreciated by the editor and by this committee—Newspaper Publishers Committee, 420 Lexington Avenue, New York City.
